

Fact:

Something that actually exists and is provable, observable, and measurable.

OROpinion:

A personal belief, judgement, feeling, or idea that is not based on proof.

Certainty is being completely confident and having no doubt about something. When we're uncertain we can focus on what we can be certain of, and this is where knowing facts from opinions can be very helpful. Mark the appropriate box to signal which statements are fact and which are opinion.
