

Opinion Stats

Having different opinions from others is what it means to be part of a diverse group. If we want variety, new ideas, and challenges then it's important to understand and celebrate that we are all unique. Look at these questions - some can be quite controversial - and take a tally of who prefers what. When you have the info you need, present your findings in a graph, and then try to come up with some conclusions about what the data is telling you.

Add columns to group your data more specifically. You might group it as; Year at school, age, gender, number of people living in your home...
